A Word About Confidentiality

What is the Mind-Body Connection and Why Should we Care?

The mindbody connection is the link between a person's thoughts, attitudes, and behaviors and their physical health.

What you think and feel effects what happens in your body and what happens in your body affects your thoughts and feelings.

Body

Mind

Emotions

Behavior

Examples of the Mind Body Connection

Have you ever:

Felt so nervous, your hands started to shake or sweat?

Been so anxious, you forget what you want to say?

Been so worried about messing up that you mess up? or

Been so afraid, you become nauseous?

Negative Thoughts Impact the Body Negatively and Positive Thoughts Impact the Body Positively.

Negative thinking patterns—assuming the worst, jumping to conclusions, and self-criticism—can make it more difficult to deal with health problems. For example, a patient diagnosed with prediabetes may think “Everyone in my family has diabetes, so there’s nothing I can do to prevent it”, even after being told by their doctor that prediabetes is reversible with diet and exercise.

Negative attitudes and feelings of helplessness and hopelessness can create chronic stress, which upsets the body’s hormone balance, depletes the brain chemicals required for happiness, and damages the immune system.

Research has found a link between an upbeat mental state and improved health, including lower blood pressure, reduced risk for heart disease, healthier weight, better blood sugar levels, and longer life.

Individuals who are able to savor positive emotions have lasting activation in the ventral striatum of the brain. The longer this activation lasts, the greater his or her feelings of well-being.” Continued activation of this part of the brain has been linked to healthful changes in the body, including lower levels of a stress hormone.

People who are emotionally well have fewer negative emotions and are able to bounce back from difficulties faster. This quality is called resilience.

Ways that Negative Thoughts and Emotions Impact the Body

- Digestive problems.
- Weakened immune response resulting in lowered resistance to disease.
- Healing more slowly. Slower response to medications and treatments.
- Cardiovascular Disease
- Sleep Disturbance
- Weight Gain
- Cognitive Impairment
- Gastrointestinal Problems
- Fertility Issues
- Addiction
- Colds, flus and other infections

The Role of the Mind in Disease Prevention

Now more than ever, doctors understand the importance of a comprehensive approach to care that includes mind, body, and spirit.

Scientific studies reveal that the hormones and neurotransmitters (chemical messengers) associated with emotion have physical effects on our body causing impacting blood pressure, heart rate, sleep patterns, and even our appetite.

Preventing chronic disease requires lifestyle changes:

Eating Healthier ---- Exercising Regularly --- Adopting Better Sleeping Habits.

However, our ability to implement these changes is driven by our attitudes, actions, and behaviors, which in turn are controlled by our mind.

The mind influences our desire to do the right thing for our bodies. Our thought patterns, fears, worries, and anxieties can take us away from the path of wellness.

Each individual approach to wellness is different, but it starts with an acceptance that our thoughts and emotions impact our health and our health influences our thoughts and emotions.

Mind-Body Therapies

Mind -body therapies are healing techniques that promote relaxation and encourage mindfulness. These therapies use the body to affect the mind, and vice versa. Some common mindbody therapies include:

- Acupuncture
- Art Therapy
- Cognitive Behavioral Therapy (CBT)
- Group Therapy
- Guided Imagery
- Meditation
- Music Therapy
- Qigong
- Tai Chi
- Yoga

Seven Amazing Things Sleep Does for Us!

Helps us feel alert. Part of why you feel groggy when you're tired is this waste building up in your brain. Your brain's sanitation department goes to work when you sleep helping you stay alert and attentive during the day.

Helps us learn new information. Sleep helps your brain store memories and information, making them easier to retrieve later.

Helps us control our impulses and remain calm. When you're sleep deprived, you don't have enough mental energy to regulate your emotions and you can become overly reactive, getting angry, irritable, sad.

Boosts our immune system. Your immune system relies on getting enough sleep to be able to function. When you're sleep deprived, you are more likely that you'll get the common cold or another nasty bugs

Manage your metabolism. Not getting enough sleep messes with our metabolism, changing how our bodies process energy. Lack of sleep can make us crave sugars and fats which can lead to weight gain, and metabolic illnesses like type 2 diabetes.

Improves our mental health. Getting enough sleep is an important part of self-care. Without sleep, symptoms of stress, anxiety and mental illness increase.

Manage ADHD symptoms. The symptoms of sleep deprivation can mimic symptoms of ADHD because they both affect the same areas of the brain.

 Follow a consistent sleep routine. Go to bed earlier and shoot for 8 hours of sleep.

Listen to relaxing music, keep clean sheets, and keep room dark, cool.

Avoid vigorous activity for at least one hour before bed. BUT, exercising earlier in the day helps sleep.

Small dietary changes can help. Eat dinner earlier, no caffeine or alcohol near bedtime (or after a certain time in the afternoon).

Deep Breathing. Practice breathing slowly, deeply, and rhythmically while consciously relaxing the muscles of your chest and belly. Establish a rhythm that works for you.

Weighted Blankets can help you calm down and stay relaxed during the night. The feeling is akin to getting an extended hug, or like being tucked in when you were a kid.

If it takes you more than 20 minutes to fall asleep, get up and make yourself a cup of herbal tea or read a book—the old-fashioned kind.

Avoid screen time up to an hour before bed. The light is stimulating and will keep you awake.

Strategies to Help us Sleep

How to Protect Your Health During Stressful Times

Physical Activity helps the body retain internal balance by using up extra adrenaline and sugar released during stressful times.

When you are physically fit, the stress response is not as great, you regain balance more quickly and you have improved resistance to disease.

Keep a Journal. This can help to organize your thoughts and feelings and provides an opportunity to understand patterns and thoughts that impact your body and feelings.

Breathing Techniques. When you experience a stressor your body goes into an “alarm stage”. Deep breathing: inhaling deeply through your nose and exhaling through your mouth can calm you down and stop or slow down the alarm stage, possibly preventing worse outcomes.

Eat a Healthy Diet. Stress uses up extra supplies of vitamin C and D. Choose foods high in these vitamins and reduce caffeine and sugar intake.

Get Enough Sleep. Stress makes it difficult to fall asleep and stay asleep. Sleep deprivation decreases your immune system and fatigue makes it difficult to concentrate and make decisions which leads to more stress creating in some cases a chronic cycle.

Some Shared Thoughts on How to Be Healthy

Always be mindful of the kindness and not the faults of others.

~ Buddha

Mindfulness means maintaining a moment-by-moment awareness of our thoughts, feelings, bodily sensations and surrounding environment. It involves acceptance, meaning that we pay attention to our thoughts and feelings without judging them; without believing, for instance, that there's a 'right' or 'wrong' way to think or feel in a given moment. When we practice mindfulness, our thoughts tune in to what we're sensing in the present moment rather than rehashing the past or imagining the future.

~ From the Greater Good Science Center at the University of California, Berkley

Kindness is not what you do, but who you are.

~ Raktivist

Just because life is full of craziness doesn't mean you must go crazy. You can experience outer chaos and still find inner peace. Nothing even needs to change outside of you for you to find calm inside of you. This inner calm is available at all times. Just breathe.

~ Karen Salmansohn

Your anger? It's telling you where you feel powerless. Your anxiety? It's telling you that something in your life is off balance. Your fear? It's telling you what you care about. Your apathy? It's telling you where you're overextended and burnt out. Your feelings aren't random, they are messengers. And if you want to get anywhere, you need to be able to let them speak to you and tell you what you really need.

~ Brianna Wiest

I spend an insane amount of time wondering if I'm doing it right. At some point I just remind myself that I'm doing my best. That is enough.

~ Myleik Teele

Happiness is like being cool, the harder you try, the less it is going to happen. So stop trying. Start living.

~ Mark Manson

It takes huge effort to free yourself from memory.

~ Paulo Coello

Be there. Be open. Be honest. Be kind. Be willing to listen, understand, accept, support and forgive. This is what it means to love.

~ Lori Deschene

Absorb what is useful, discard what is useless and add what is specifically your own.

~ Bruce Lee

With mindfulness, you can establish yourself in the present in order to touch the wonders of life that are available in that moment.

~ Thich Nhat Hanh

When you are a young person, you are like a young creek, and you meet many rocks, many obstacles and difficulties on your way. You hurry to get past these obstacles and get to the ocean. But as the creek moves down through the fields, it becomes larger and calmer and it can enjoy the reflection of the sky. It's wonderful. You will arrive at the sea anyway so enjoy the journey. Enjoy the sunshine, the sunset, the moon, the birds, the trees, and the many beauties along the way. Taste every moment of your daily life.

~ Thich Nhat Hanh

The more you are focused on time – past and future – the more you miss the Now, the most precious thing there is.

~ Eckhart Tolle

Your entire life happens inside your body. It's the one home you will always occupy and can never sell. But you can renovate it.

~ James Clear

Just because life can get crazy doesn't mean you must go crazy. You can experience outer chaos and still experience inner peace. Nothing even needs to change outside you. This calm is available at all times. Just breathe.

~ Karen Salmansohn

I always forget how important the empty days are, how important it may be sometimes not to expect to produce anything, even a few lines in a journal. A day when one has not pushed oneself to the limit seems a damaged, damaging day - a sinful day. Not so! The most valuable thing one can do for the psyche, occasionally, is to let it rest, wander, live in the changing light of a room.

~ May Sarton

Just keep moving. Someone said this to me a long time ago. It's a Buddhist saying, I think: "There is no wasted effort."

~ Lauren Graham

People do not become lawyers for their health. They do it to become part of a learned profession that enables them to effect social change, protect people's rights, and provide representation to ensure an ordered world. Lawyers can provide the best representation if they are fit and they are entitled to enjoy good health themselves. It is the least they deserve for maintaining the rule of law.

~ Robert Herbst
